

Feb 19-22 Lesson Report Summary:

AM Classes:

Level 1: Keep reviewing prepositions of time and numbers in general.

Level 2: Students can definitely use more time on the prepositions of time and also the adverbs of frequency. Leave time for questions given the varied levels of English in the class.

Level 3: Great discussions this week. Students perform well in terms of quizzes and fill-in-the-blank activities. However, it is not easy to make up a full sentence without making grammatical errors.

PM Classes:

Level 1: Try creating more small group activities to break up the interactions.

Level 2: Dialogue practice is helpful!

Level 3: Find creative ways to increase participation. Keep students from quitting! ☹️

Weekly Attendance:

AM Classes:

Level 1: 30 students

Level 2: 40 students

Level 3: 29 students

PM Classes:

Level 1: 53 students

Level 2: 53 students

Level 3: 19 students

ESL Resource: <https://app.ziteboard.com/>

A digital whiteboard that can be used and seen by the whole class. Share the link to your board to invite the class to add their creativity.

Tip of the Week:

Do's & Don'ts for Teaching English-Language Learners

By Larry Ferlazzo, March 12, 2012

MODELING

Do model for students what they are expected to do or produce, especially for new skills or activities, by explaining and demonstrating the learning actions, sharing your thinking processes aloud, and showing good teacher and student work samples. Modeling promotes learning and motivation, as well as increasing student self-confidence—they will have a stronger belief that they can accomplish the learning task if they follow steps that were demonstrated.

RATE OF SPEECH AND WAIT TIME

Do speak slowly and clearly, and provide students with enough time to formulate their responses, whether in speaking or in writing. Remember, they are thinking and producing in two or more languages. After asking a question, wait for a few seconds before calling on someone to respond. This “wait time” provides all students with an opportunity to think and process, and gives especially ELLs a needed period to formulate a response.

Don’t speak too fast, and if a student tells you they didn’t understand what you said, never, ever repeat the same thing in a louder voice.

USE OF NON-LINGUISTIC CUES

Do use visuals, sketches, gestures, intonation, and other non-verbal cues to make both language and content more accessible to students. Teaching with visual representations of concepts can be hugely helpful to ELLs.

Don’t stand in front of the class and lecture, or rely on a textbook as your only visual aid.

GIVING INSTRUCTIONS

Do give verbal and written instructions—this practice can help all learners, especially ELLs. In addition, it is far easier for a teacher to point to the board in response to the inevitable repeated question, “What are we supposed to do?”

Don’t act surprised if students are lost when you haven’t clearly written and explained step-by-step directions.

CHECK FOR UNDERSTANDING

Do regularly check that students are understanding the lesson. After an explanation or lesson, a teacher could say, “Please put thumbs up, thumbs down, or sideways to let me know if this is clear, and it’s perfectly fine if you don’t understand or are unsure—I just need to know.” This last phrase is essential if you want students to respond honestly. Teachers can also have students quickly answer on a Post-it note that they place on their desks. The teacher can then quickly circulate to check responses.

When teachers regularly check for understanding in the classroom, students become increasingly aware of monitoring their own understanding, which serves as a model of good study skills. It also helps ensure that students are learning, thinking, understanding, comprehending, and processing at high levels.

Don’t simply ask, “Are there any questions?” This is not an effective way to gauge what all your students are thinking. Waiting until the end of class to see what people write in their learning log is not going to provide timely feedback. Also, don’t assume that students are understanding because they are smiling and nodding their heads—sometimes they’re just being polite.

ENCOURAGE DEVELOPMENT OF HOME LANGUAGE

Do encourage students to continue building their literacy skills in their home language, also known as L1. Research has found that learning to read in the home language promotes reading achievement in the second language as “transfer” occurs. This transfer may include phonological awareness, comprehension skills, and background knowledge.

While the research on transfer of L1 skills to L2 cannot be denied, it doesn’t mean that we should not encourage the use of English in class and outside of the classroom.

Don’t “ban” students from using their native language in the classroom. Forbidding students to use their primary languages does not promote a positive learning environment where students feel safe to take risks and make mistakes. This practice can be harmful to the relationships between teachers and students, especially if teachers act more like language police than language coaches.
